Full Verbal Description A very crudely made cylindrical bead on a highly micaceous, moderate in texture, paste. One end is 1.51 cm in one direction, but only 1.35 cm on the perpendicular. The other end is rounder, varying from 1.35-1.39 cm. This smaller end is chipped, and the central stringing hole is here 0.56-0.60 cm in diameter. On average 0.30 cm from this end is a series of incised lines going around the bead. There are 3 segments to the decoration. I do not think the segmentation is deliberate; rather it resulted from faulty technique, as the line is variable in width and depth even within one segment. The larger end, in contrast, is not flat, but half is on an angle. The central hole is here triangular, with a maximum width of 0.43 cm. About 0.45 cm below the end is an incised line that goes halfway around the bead. On the beads middle section there is a flattish area with unsmoothed clay lumps on it. The exterior is irregular, with ~~many~~ small pits and lumps overall.
